Windsor Lock is situated about $3\frac{1}{4}$ miles from Oxford (and according to some accounts) is locally famous as the site of the nunnery to which the "Fair Rosamond" retired after her banishment from her royal lover (Henry II.). It is now a popular resort with rowing men, who find the shady riverside gardens of the "trout" (a favourite inn) a most desirable haven of rest after the pull on the river.
